

In this talk, Dr. Wang will provide an overview of the current status of wind deployment in China, identifying past and present governmental policies together with cultural issues and technological development that have led to the very large growth of wind energy production. She will also address targeted wind levels for the future and problems that will need to be solved in order to reach those levels.